

ABSTRACT

Disclosed is a lock useful for the removably securing items into a track system.

The lock according to the present invention has a body with an attached handle portion.

The body has preferably a rectangular box shape with two opposed, cut-out sections.

- 5 There is a downward portion that projects from a mid-section of the body and attaches to the item securing portion.